1.  ten military aircraft Siebel-204 and one Doerch were parked at the Otrokovice airfield (P60/011). Two Siebel-204 were circling above the airfield. All the aircraft were painted olive-drab.
2. There is no Air Force unit permanently stationed at the airfield and the field is not protected by any fence. Patrols of two SMH men armed with submachine guns guard the airfield constantly.
3. The airfield is used by both military and civilian aircraft. Its use is limited to dry weather and good visibility as it is a grassy surface with insufficient drainage system and is not equipped with landing aids. No radar station or antiaircraft defense exist at the airfield.

The 23rd Infantry Regiment, [ ] stationed in Nyrsko (N50/U99), was [ ] employed in the Cervene Drev (Red Forest) area of the Surava mountains for training in the building of defense positions for the whole division along the Czech-Bavarian border. The defense position consisted of a line of trenches parallel to the border line and 100 to 200 meters from the border. Emplacements for heavy machine guns were built at irregular distances within the line of trenches. The emplacements were fortified by wooden logs with a layer of earth two meters thick at the front and 1 meter on the top. At a depth of another 100 to 200 meters, emplacements for self-propelled guns were built. Great emphasis was laid on camouflage and a line of dirty shallow trenches was dug to mislead the enemy. The regiment was commanded by 1st Lt. (fnu) Zivny [ ] about 90 percent of them in the regiment hold anti-communist attitude and grumbled against hard work and a lack of rations.
